DEMOCRATIC PRINCIPLES and Measures.

A strict construction of the Constitution, and no assumption of doubtful powers. A Diplomat, asking for nothing but what is clearly right and submitting to nothing wrong. No connection between the government and banks. An ad valorem revenue tariff. No public debt, either by the General Government or by the States, except for objects of urgent necessity. No assumption by the General Government of the debts of the States, either directly or indirectly, by a distribution of the proceeds of the public lands. No extensive system of Internal Improvement by the General Government, or by the States. A constitutional barrier against improvident State loans. The honest payment of our debts and the sacred preservation of the public faith. A gradual return from a paper to a gold credit system. No grants of exclusive charters and privileges by special legislation, to banks. No swindling corporations. No connection between Church and State. A preference for democrats over whigs for every office. No interference in the rule of the majority in all cases of party discipline. No proscription for honest opinions. Fostering aid to public education. A "progressive" reformation of all abuses.

Ghost. "Do you believe in ghosts, Mrs. Partington?" was asked by an old lady, somewhat timidly. "To be sure I do," she replied, "as much as I believe that bright fulminating things will rise in the east to-morrow morning, if we live and nothing happens. Two apprehensions have lately appeared in our own family. Why, I saw my dear Paul, a fortnight before he died, with my own eyes, just as plain as I see you now, and though it turned out afterwards to be a rosbush with a night cap on it, I shall always think to the day of my desolation, that it was a forerunner sent to me. 'Tother one came in the night when we were asleep, and carried away three candles and a pint of spirits, that we kept in the house for an embarkation. Believe in ghosts, indeed! I guess I do, and he must be a dreadful stigmatic as doesn't!"

An exchange paper gives the following edition of some inspired poet: I kissed the tiny hand I held, I pressed the fairy form, I vowed I'd shield her from the blast, And from the world's cold storm; She raised her melting eyes to mine, They were filled with drops of woe; With quivering lip she faintly said - "Now darn ye, let me go!"

BOUND TO COME OFF - The Pittsburg Mercury tells the following good one: Somewhere in the West, a noble knight of the latter and brush was performing the operation of shaving a Houser with a very dull razor. "Stop!" said the Houser, "that won't do." "What's do matter, boss?" "That razor pulls." "Well, no matter for dat, sah. If de handle of de razor don't break, de beard's bound to come off!"
